Options for Small Business Owners in Financial Distress: A 5-Part Series

Many small business owners are suffering financially due to the effects of COVID-19 and the unpredictable, rapidly changing economy in general. In this five-part series, we will discuss the various options available to small businesses in financial trouble, all the way from working out obligations informally to Chapter 11 reorganization to going out of business.

Part 1: Your Small Business: The Economic Turbulence – Analyzing and improving your business operations (see below)

Part 2: Accumulating Cash and Improving Your Business' Cash Flow – Analyzing and improving the business' flow, as well as obtaining additional financing if necessary (see below)

Upcoming articles:

Part 3: Non-bankruptcy solutions

Part 4: Pros and cons of various types of bankruptcy

Part 5: Getting through a bankruptcy case and coming out on the other side

Part 1: Your Small Business: Getting Through the Economic Turbulence

It's easy to be paralyzed by the rush of things going on during financial distress, but all is not lost. There are many things to consider as you respond to your particular situation whether the problem is due to a single event, a customer's crisis, or systemic or external long-term problems. Read more

Part 2: Accumulating Cash and Improving Your Business' Cash Flow

Cash is how your business likely will get through its difficulties. Simply put, obtain as much cash as you can, and spend it sparingly. Here are some thoughts on improving your cash position and cash flow. Read more
